Summer 2005

At the June meeting of the Board of Directors of Children and Family Urban Ministries I was making a report about Awesome Summer Days, the six-week program offered during the school break. As I said, "Children were given swimming lessons for two weeks," I had a moment of recognition. What sounded like a simple statement of a simple event was, in truth, something remarkable.

Suddenly I realized all that went into creating that "simple" event. A staff person with the Red Cross and I were having an informal conversation at a community event. She asked me to have Linda Danielson, CFUM Program Director, call her about swimming lessons for students in the Awesome Summer Days program. Linda made the call immediately. The decision-making process in the structure of the Red Cross was begun. They approved the request to offer two weeks of swimming lessons for thirty children at no cost, hiring additional staff to accommodate the entire group, thirty-five students, ages 5-12. The Birdland Pool was scheduled. CFUM staff altered the already full daily schedule to include this new opportunity. Appreciative parents filled out and returned permission forms, their children would be safer around water! Walnut Hills

United Methodist Church, invited by church member, Russ Wilson; and Lutheran Church of Hope, invited by church staff member, Pat Quaid, provided funding to rent a school bus to transport the children for ten days. Chuck at the bus barn found drivers. Janelle Mueller, CFUM staff member and cook for not only Awesome Summer Days, but also for the Trinity Academy, agreed to serve lunch twice in order to accommodate the swimming lesson schedule. Charles Thomas, another CFUM staff member, washed and dried thirty suits and towels every day, in the washer and dryer given by Oakwood UMC several years ago. A lot of the suits were collected by CFUM volunteers Marilyn and Chuck Howieson from thrift stores and garage sales. And finally, thirty children learned the routine of getting to the pool and back in an organized and timely fashion AND they did their best to learn to swim in ten hours.

"Children were given swimming lessons for two weeks." Such a simple statement, about such a simple event. But then the recognition comes, that nothing is all that simple, that most things are truly remarkable.

There's not much that happens at Children and Family Urban Ministries that we do not recognize as remarkable. Think about serving breakfast for school children for 38 years. Remarkable. Or providing after school activities for 50 students every day from late July through early June. Remarkable. Or working with 30-50 children all day for the ten weeks of break throughout the school year. Remarkable. Think about inviting 100 neighbors or so to a good meal a couple dozen times a month. Remarkable. Or giving away 700 bags of school supplies to students every year. Remarkable. Or celebrating the feasts of Thanksgiving and Christmas every year with well over 200 neighbors. Remarkable. In the process you can learn a little something about swimming...

*As swimmers dare
to lie face to the sky
and water bears them,
as hawks rest upon air
and air sustains them,
so would I learn to attain freefall, and float into Creator Spirit's deep embrace knowing no effort earns that all-surrounding grace.*

GREATEST HITS OF SUMMER 2005

As the deejays used to say, "The hits just keep on rollin'." Summer at Children and Family Urban Ministries was one hit event and experience after another.

"O the Places I'll Go," (adapted from a Dr. Suess title) was the theme of Awesome Summer Days, the five-week, all-day program offered to thirty-five children this summer. And, O, did they Go! Each morning was given to rotations through educational experiences including reading, writing, math, computers, and drumming. Some afternoons afforded recreational activities including soccer, baseball, tennis, golf, basketball, and walking. Other afternoons were given to creating the art of masks, maracas, dream catchers, and self-portraits. Some afternoons the hits went on the road, visiting neighborhoods around Des Moines, the small town of Polk City, the larger town of Pella, Central College, the Altoona Water Park, and Sleepy Hollow Sports Park.

The Awesome Summer Days staff was headed by Linda Danielson, CFUM Program Director. The hard-working, faithful and creative staff included CFUM staff members Laura Fuller, Janelle Mueller and Charles Thomas; Simpson College Intern, Jen Gibson; Valley High School teachers Cameron Gale and Cody Johnson; Drake University students, Jill Clarke and Zvikomorero "Z" Mudimu; Iowa State students Dan Hunt, Amaryllis Monroig, and Terrell Robbins; University of Iowa student, Devin Van Dyke; and recent Johnston High School graduate Erik Holt.

Volunteers included local "celebrity" readers (including Preston and Patty Daniels, Marcus McIntosh, and Ako Abdul-Samad), a United Way Foster Grandparent, Roosevelt High School Success students, and several individuals.

Primary funding was provided by a $10,000 grant from the United Methodist Des Moines District Community Worker Board. Additional funding came from Lutheran Church of Hope, St. Paul Episcopal Cathedral, Walnut Hills UMC, St. Pius Catholic School, and faithful CFUM partners. A book is being produced that will include stories and poetry written by Awesome Summer Days participants. Here is a sample.

Awesome Summer Days By Rebecca, Seventh Grade

*Awesome Summer Days was the place for me, Awesome Summer Days was the place to be.
We played games, we went outside,
I went five times down the yellow slide.
I will come back again to spend a good time
The sun will rise and shine, shine, shine.*

Remarkable.

The Back-to-School Health Fair was another hit of the summer. In its fifth year, this event is relied upon by families with children returning to school, especially those attending Moulton Extended Learning Center, which began on July 21. The effort was again coordinated by CFUM staff member, Carol Kuehnhoff, but this year with an entire committee to share the fun and hard work. The committee included Mary Ellen Barber, Alecia Cates, Denny Coon, Patty Coon, Barb Dinnen, Erin Perdock, Cory Schoening, Joyce Webb, Emily Weeks, Annette Wildin, and Carmen Lampe Zeitler.

The planning committee and the volunteers for the day reflected well the collaborators in the fair: Children and Family Urban Ministries, Comunidad de Fe Las Americas, the John R. Grubb YMCA, Mercy/Mayo Family Practice Residency Program, and Trinity United Methodist Church.

Major funders for the event included Mid-Iowa Health Foundation, the Polk County Medical Alliance, and West Des Moines United Methodist Church.

School supply packets were prepared for 700 students (and stored in the air-conditioned comfort of St. John's Lutheran Church, down the street), over 70 physicals were provided. Dozens of community information booths were operating under the big tent.

Bags and bags of popcorn were popped, hundreds of snow cones scooped, countless donated cold beverages were available, a barbeque was again provided by Oakwood United Methodist Church to end the day, and over 100 donated door prizes were given out during the meal.

The festive air of the Health Fair, complete with clowns and face painters, games and prizes, crafts, a water spray, music and good times almost overshadows the need that drives the event. Preparing children to return to school is costly for families. Being prepared is critical to the success of children in school. The Back-to-School Health Fair is a way for the community to meet the needs and act upon the hopes that families have for their children as they begin a new school year. It is an honor for CFUM to be a part of such an effort.

Remarkable.

A couple of words about school supplies for the Back-to-School Health Fair—THANK YOU! Collecting school supplies for a Back-to-School Health Fair in early July, before all the school supply sales, is quite a challenge. Trinity UMC member, Mary Ellen Barber, took on that challenge this year.

To help meet the challenge for 2006, it may be helpful for congregations, mission committees, Church School classes, youth groups, Vacation Bible School planning groups, places of business, to have the need in mind as plans are made in the fall of 2005. Mary Ellen or others of the Back-to-School Health Fair planning committee are available to come and speak to your group or offer the final report of the 2005 Back-to-School Health Fair. If you would like to invite them, they may be contacted at 282-3242 or info@cfum.org.

At the risk of having missed someone dropping donations off, here is a list of those contributing school supplies or to their purchase this summer. (If you have been inadvertently left off the list, please accept our apologies and let us know so our list is accurate.)

Tony Berberich, Larry and Donna Cheeves, Christ Community Church, Corporate Image, Des Moines First Christian Church, Doherty Flowers, Marcia Freer, Marilyn Henrichs, The Homestead, Rosalea Johnson, Mingo/Farrar UMC, Office Depot, Pacesetters Class of Des Moines First UMC, Polk City UMC, Principal Financial Group (Steve Thilges), Karla Rice's Youth Group, Strahan UMC, Target, Amy Thomsen, Urbandale UCC, Walmart, West Des Moines UMC, Wellman Baptist Church, and Windsor Heights UMC.

Summer with The WILD Girls was a hit parade all of its own. Members of The WILD Girls participated once again in the rigorous and exciting Gateway Dance Theater Summer Workshop the first week that school was out. In late June and early July The WILD Girls were privileged for the second year in a row to work with Professional actor and director T Valada Viars in the writing and producing of an original drama called "Act Like a Dreamer." It has played to rave reviews at Awesome Summer Days, The Ritual Café, the Forest Avenue Library, Wellspring Community Church, Cornerstone Treatment Center, and Urbandale United Church of Christ. The drama offers a message to young adolescent girls about making positive and healthy decisions for themselves.

The WILD Girls after school program is funded throughout the school year by a grant from the Chrysalis Foundation. Funding for this drama seminar was provided by a grant from the Iowa Women's Foundation.

Deaonda Bradley-Hill is the first WILD Girl in the two-year-old program, consistently involved in the program, to go on to high school. As an affirmation of her participation in the WILD Girls and as a send-off to high school, money was raised among WILD Girls supporters to send Deaonda on a trip. She went to Seattle, Washington, stayed with Joanna Kirstein (a former WILD Girl Mentor and daughter of Program Coordinator Naomi Kirstein) shadowed Joanna and two other women on their jobs and saw the sights of Seattle.

The WILD Girls drama and Deaonda's Dream will be shared at the WILD Girls Hook-Up in October.

At the end of the school year in June several WILD Girls expressed serious concern about the increase of gang activity in their neighborhoods, and the considerable pressure to become involved. In response to their concerns, and with the help of the Iowa Women's Foundation grant, Stephanie Kirstein, a student at Luther College and past volunteer for the WILD Girls, was hired to coordinate activities for the WILD Girls throughout the summer. Activities included afternoons spent at the Forest Avenue Library doing research for the drama workshop, and gatherings hosted by Group Mentors including barbeques and sleepovers, picnics and movie nights, and participation in local events like the Arts Festival and The Back-to-School Health Fair. Helping girls to get together in safe places, talk openly and honestly, and feel like someone "has their back" goes a long way toward helping girls make positive and health choices for themselves, their community, their world—which is what the WILD Girls is all about.

There are always those people around who are thinking ahead. Ruth Green a member of the Waukee United Methodist Church and a long-time partner of CFUM, and an annual volunteer at the Neighborhood Christmas Celebration is thinking about that celebration already! In July Ruth picked up the boxes of costumes used for the children's pageant that is a part of that celebration. She is gathering a group of friends to repair and enhance the costumes so they will be ready to go on December 10.

RETURNING TO THE REMARKABLE ROUTINE

By now, for students attending Moulton Extended Learning Center, the school year is a month old. The school year routine of programs offered by CFUM has returned. Remarkable.

The Breakfast Club has returned to its school year schedule, 6:30-8:00 a.m. Close to 100 children are enrolled. Breakfast Club Supervisor, Laura Fuller and a faithful staff of volunteers welcome children with a good breakfast, games, reading, and creative activities each morning, Monday through Friday. Always more volunteers are needed, especially to play and read and interact with children in order to give them a good start to their day. Beginning in September Power Hour reading days will be scheduled again for the second and fourth Thursdays of each month. Volunteers are needed to read with and to children.

Donations are welcome. Suggestions include cereal, flavored instant oatmeal packets, eggs, frozen waffles and French toast sticks, syrup, sausage, bacon, and juice. Books and games for students pre-school through middle school are also needed on a regular basis.

The Haven (for elementary school students) and The Haven Too (for middle school students) the CFUM after school programs, are well into their routine. The maximum sixty students are enrolled with a daily attendance of about 55 students. This year a greater emphasis will be put on the opportunity to read. Volunteers are needed to read with or to students Monday through Thursday, 4:00-4:30 p.m. Ways to include more opportunities to enhance math skills are also being explored.

In addition to offering after school programming, CFUM has also offered programming during school breaks that are unique to the Moulton Extended Learning Center calendar. Three weeks in the fall, September 26-October 15, are scheduled for break or invitation only (for students below grade level) academic enrichment programs. In effect, for CFUM, that means three weeks of all-day programming. Most of the children enrolled in CFUM programs are at or above grade level, in part because of their involvement in the programs. As a result CFUM staff is looking for creative ways to provide and fund a quality program during those weeks.

In addition to school breaks, early dismissal days present a challenge as well. On those days the number of children attending the programs increases to the maximum of sixty. At the same time, the volunteers the after school programs depend upon most heavily, college and high school students, are often not available in the early afternoon. This fall there is early dismissal: August 24 (1:00), August 31 (1:30), September 14 (1:30), October 26 (1:30), November 9 (1:30), November 30 (1:00), December 7 (1:00), and December 21 (2:40). In addition there is no school on September 1, 2, and 23. Volunteers are especially needed those days between the time of dismissal and 3:30 p.m. Special projects to do with science, the arts (music, art, drama), history, and recreation are especially welcome on those days.

To further explore such opportunities contact Linda Danielson at 282-3242 or linda@cfum.org.

The WILD Girls from last year are meeting during August with Group Mentors Tammy Guild and Skywalker Payne. The girls are preparing to recruit and welcome new participants.

WILD Girl, Angelique Hilson, a seventh grader, won the Business Idol Award at a recent business workshop encouraging young entrepreneurs. The workshop was attended by several WILD Girls. Angelique's business is making and selling beaded bracelets.

The WILD Girls is a gender-specific program for middle school girls about to enter its third year. The Wonder Girls, a gender-specific for girls in grades 4 and 5, began last January and this year will begin its first full school year. Both programs are scheduled to begin the week of September 12. The WILD Girls meet on Monday, The Wonder Girls on Tuesday, both from 3:00-5:00 p.m. Volunteers are needed to be Group Mentors during the after school programs, facilitating small groups of girls around specific topics or tasks. Volunteers are also needed on occasion to provide transportation, snacks, or other means of support. For more information please contact CFUM at 282-3242 or info@cfum.org.

Here's a story from Maryellen Knowles, a supporter of the WILD Girls (sometimes called WILD Women). Maryellen designed the WILD Girls brochure. In July she was scouting around town for the best price to print 100 brochures, and after some negotiating found the best price at a local office supply store. When she returned to pick up the copies, there was a note that said, "Paid in Full." The woman who printed them was so touched by the work of and for the WILD Girls, she paid it herself, and made a promise to pay for any printing the WILD Girls needed as her contribution.

CHILDREN'S SABBATH: CREATING JUSTICE FOR CHILDREN

It is hard to say in just a few words what Children and Family Urban Ministries is about, but here are some words CFUM is trying on for size: "Creating welcome, nurture, and justice." The welcome and nurture parts of CFUM's work clearly go on day in and day out. The justice part is less clearly seen. In bringing together those of privilege in the community and those who are marginalized in the community the hope is that understanding is gained and a more just community will result. That is slow and difficult, sometimes almost imperceptible work.

But at least once a year the work of justice—making things right—for children can easily be made clear on Children's Sabbath. For fourteen years the national child advocacy group, the Children's Defense Fund, has provided resources encouraging faith communities to observe Children's Sabbath. The date for Children's Sabbath is traditionally held on the third weekend of October. In 2005 it is designated for October 9 on the United Methodist Calendar. Although a congregation may observe Children's Sabbath any time. The 2005 theme is "Putting Our Faith into Action to Seek Justice for Children."

The Children's Sabbath Manual is a treasure trove of worship, devotional, study and action resources for all faiths and all ages. The worship resources include possibilities for interfaith, ecumenical, and congregational services. Study and action resources are extensive enough to be used throughout the year. The manual is available at www.childrensdefense.org or (202) 628-8787. A copy is available at the CFUM office for your perusal.

CFUM staff, Board members, and volunteers are available to help plan and/or speak at Children's Sabbath observances.

Let us remember the mission of all your prophets from Adam, to Jesus, Moses, and through to Muhammed who said, "If any of you witnesses an injustice he should change it with his hand, and if he is not able, then with his tongue, and if he is not able, then detest it with his heart. But that shows the weakest of faith."

From a dua written by Afeefa Syeed, and offered in the Muslim Resources for the Children's Sabbath, Children's Sabbath Manual 2005.

CFUM SHOWS REMARKABLE GROWTH

The scale of Children and Family Urban Ministries has grown in the past eight years. The programs have grown in number from three to ten; the budget from $40,000 to almost $300,000; the staff from two (one full-time, one part-time) to eleven (two full-time, nine part-time), the numbers of neighbors who come daily to participate in CFUM programs from about 70 to over 200. That is remarkable growth.

The CFUM Board of Directors has recently approved a One-Year Plan with the goal of creating an infrastructure for CFUM that will better support the organization at its present scale, and prepare it to move more effectively into the future. Objectives of the plan include: to create a simple and useful strategic plan (with the help of a grant from the Greater Des Moines Community Foundation), begin an intentional process for board development, and establish task groups to create intentional plans for communications, development, and human resources.

CFUM has been very good at consistently getting through the day and all that comes through the door on any given day. It is time to give some focus to getting down the road, and all the possibilities that yet lie ahead.

Current members of the CFUM Board of Directors are: Denny Coon, Ex Officio Member from Trinity UMC; Chuck Current; Mary Kay Dial, Secretary; Bryan Downey, President; Sandy Drescher; Cindy Feldman; Kirk Neustrom; Tony Salem, Treasurer; and Kathy Winter.

NEW MURAL GRACES THIRD FLOOR ROOM

Just over a year ago CFUM and Trinity UMC began to work together to reclaim a large room on the third floor of the church building. Once a room used as a “sanctuary” for undocumented immigrants facing dangerous situations in their country of origin, it had gradually become a storage room. When school began last July CFUM needed the room for the newly inaugurated The Haven Too after school program for middle school students.

The items in storage in the room found new homes or their way to the landfill. CFUM volunteers Ray Morris and Gene Leonard patched the plaster and primed the walls. Parents of children in the after school program painted the room. Furniture and rugs were donated, computers were installed, books and games found shelves. Work groups moved furniture, laid carpet, continued to clean. The room became quite a haven for The Haven Too.

This summer the room became a work of art as well. Summer staff members Dan Hunt, Amaryllis Monroig, and Terrell Robbins; all artists and art students at Iowa State University created a mural on the north wall. The idea for the mural came from the middle school students who are a part of The Haven Too. They wanted the mural to depict their neighborhood. The students involved with Awesome Summer Days had the great experience of seeing the idea for the mural become reality.

The mural depicts the corner of Eight and College, where the church building is located, in a realist style.

MICE AT THE TOP OF CFUM (ELECTRONIC) WISH LIST

One of the great additions to CFUM programming in the last year is creating computer labs for use in the school break and after school programs. The computer lab would be improved with the addition of optical mice. Eleven computers are in use at this time.

CFUM has been the grateful recipient of many donated computers. Volunteer Bryan Litscher has made the most of those computers, kept them working, upgraded as much as possible. The work of the CFUM staff would be greatly enhanced by new computers and flat screen monitors.

One CFUM Board member offers often this fine proverb: “It is no sin to ask, and no calamity to be refused.” CFUM lives by such words.

A WORD ABOUT CLOTHING DONATIONS

If you have good, used, seasonal clothing to donate, please contact the CFUM office before bringing it to the building. As much as we want to be a conduit for needed items, there is virtually no storage space in the building, so sometimes we cannot accommodate donations. If we cannot take donations, we will suggest other possible places.

Education is the single most consistent and powerful instrument for the advancement of an individual and a people.

CHILDWATCH
“Code Red”
Alert for our Children

Note: This CHILDWATCH page is written by Linda Danielson, CFUM Program Director.

Over 200 people from across the U.S. concerned for the needs of children gathered to learn, listen, pray, and network at the Annual Samuel DeWitt Proctor Institute for Child Advocacy Ministry. We were inspired and energized by great speakers and preachers. We were also challenged with the awesome task of standing up for and providing the basic human needs for the poor and marginalized in our society to give them the opportunity to live productive and healthy lives.

Marian Wright Edelman opened the conference by sharing with us that this is the most dangerous time for children since the Children’s Defense Fund began. Our nation, preoccupied with the war in Iraq, the Social Security crisis, and the growing deficit, has diverted its attention away from the massive tax cuts that are starving federal child and family investments including Medicaid, Head Start, child welfare, affordable housing and family nutrition.

Our children are facing a silent tsunami. Every day 30,000 children are dying from hunger, poor water and illness. These daunting statistics immobilize us and the task appears to be too large. We were reminded as people of faith, God provides the power to move mountains. Now is the time for us to call on that faith and save our children. Now is the time to stop this deadly tsunami. We need to stop allowing religion to be used as a wedge to divide us and we need to allow our faith to be a bridge that will unite us. Whether one considers oneself a Democrat, a Republican, liberal or conservative; we are Biblically mandated to provide for the families and children in our communities.

Now is the time for you to have conversations with your Congressional representatives before they reconvene in September to continue on the path of passing legislation that neglects the powerless in our society. God is asking the question, “How are the kids doing?” If our kids are not doing well, our society is not doing well.

The statistics are daunting here in Iowa also. Children do not have the proper nutrition available to them to grow healthy bodies. Our neighborhoods are unsafe due to crime and gang activity. Too many do not have adequate health care, and our education system is falling behind. Depending on who is reporting, somewhere between 40% & 50% of our youth are not graduating from high school. The future of our children is at stake. If we do not intervene now, our children who are at risk will end up either dead or in prison.

Tell your local and state legislators they need to help support our children. Our children need health care, a good education, safe housing and neighborhoods, our children need community mentors and they need them now.

Politicians tend to look and see which way the wind is blowing when deciding how they will vote. Just like Martin Luther King, Jr. did many years ago during the civil rights challenges, our job is to change the direction of the wind!

Our children do not have the time to wait to see if the wealthy who have received tax cuts will jump start the economy to help them have a better life. Our children need our intervention. They need our prayers. They need for us to mentor them and let them know we sincerely care for them.

Over 200 youth attending another conference on the same site joined us for some of the sessions. All were high school graduates, some were currently in college, some had graduated from college and others were planning on attending graduate school. All had faced insurmountable challenges. They shared heart wrenching stories of growing up with parents addicted to drugs, their own involvement with drugs, gang activity, and physical, mental and emotional abuse in and out of the “system”.

All of these youth had beaten the odds. What made the difference for them, allowed them to experience success were individuals in their lives who cared for them. People who could see something in them when they were not able to see it in themselves. People who walked alongside them providing the financial and emotional support they so desperately needed.

We are Biblically mandated to provide such support for our children. We need to become politically involved to provide legislation that protects children and families. We need to dismantle the cradle to prison pipeline and reroute our children to a productive future.

We are guilty of many errors and many faults but our worst crime is abandoning the children, neglecting the fountain of life. Many things can wait. The child cannot. Right now is the time his bones are being formed, his blood is being made, and his senses are being developed. To him we cannot answer “Tomorrow.” His name is “Today.”
